

FROM YOUR ATTORNEY OR MEDIATOR

Two homes. One calm plan. And a little room to breathe.

Most co-parenting apps stop at a calendar and a message log. Life, Apparently™ is built around what actually causes friction — and what each home still keeps private.

What makes it different

1 A private planner for each home

Each household gets its own Family Pro planner with 6 users — because raising kids takes a village, and it runs smoother when everyone can see the plan.

2 Agreements: your shared house rules

Rules you both live by — bedtimes, screens, holidays, new partners — with exceptions and what happens if one is broken. It counts only when both approve; any edit resets approval.

3 Handoffs with the real details

Pickup and drop-off can each have their own address and driver. Helpers and approved teen drivers can claim open rides. Holidays rotate even/odd years.

4 Budget & planning together

Plan kids' costs in a shared budget, add receipts, and move each expense approve → reimbursed → confirmed with who did each step. Upload a statement to reconcile.

5 Messages that stay on the record

Messages can't be edited or deleted after sending. Money talks get their own parent-only discussion, so decisions are easy to find later.

6 Kids get a voice, not the controls

Kids see their schedule and can ask for a trip or expense — parents decide. Allowance and savings goals follow them between homes.

7 Privacy that's enforced

Grandparents and sitters get only what both parents allow. Medical records stay private; allergies stay visible for safety.

8 Records you can print

Dated summaries of schedules, messages, expenses and agreements, with time zones and signature lines. Not certified — the court decides how to use them.

Start in 3 steps

1. Go to lifeapparentlycoparent.app
2. Tap Start your circle, add kids and schedule
3. Invite your co-parent and any helpers

One price, both homes

30 days free, then $24.99/mo or $249/yr. Covers both parents, every child, helpers and two Family Pro planners. Either parent can pay — paying gives no extra control.

Scan to try the demo

Recommended by: _____

Contact: _____

Good to know: printed records are dated summaries from the app — not certified, notarized or independently verified; the court decides how to use them. Details at lifeapparentlycoparent.app/records-reliability · Life, Apparently™ Brand by Danielle Blenkush · lifeapparentlybrand@gmail.com